SCHOOL REPORT.

---

We again present the report of the schools in town for your perusal.

Five schools have been maintained throughout the school year, it being the best way to do in the opinion of the present school board. Each year brings its own problems to solve, and what seems best or necessary at one time may not prove to be best at another time.

It has been necessary to make more changes of teachers than is desirable, but we think we have been very fortunate in securing excellent teachers and we have been well pleased with their work in the schoolroom; the pupils have appeared interested in their work and made good progress in their studies. Better order in one or two instances would have made the terms more successful, perhaps.

There are more tardy marks and absences than we like to see in some of the registers.

The state money is given according to the average attendance, so it is important that parents send their children regularly.

We also realize the importance of the parents being very careful in their criticisms of the teacher's methods before the children; it does not harm the teacher but will be a great injury to your children.

A child does not understand many times and tells things outside different from the facts. If at any time parents are not satisfied, see the teacher and talk it over kindly with her; it may prevent much trouble; but please do not go thinking your child is all right, therefore the teacher in the wrong.

It is very important that the children obey readily in school; we do not expect them to be anything but children, but the earlier trained to obey the easier for them to learn.

Nearly any teacher will say that they can tell which children are brought up to obey in the home, so it is much to your credit that they obey quickly in school and if you impress them with the idea that they go to school to learn and obey the teacher, you will do them a great kindness.

No boy will ever be capable of being a captain or leader of men who has not first learned obedience himself, both in the home and at school. The schools are for the good of the children, that they may be young men and ladies fitted to do town business and earn a livelihood for themselves, and we wish both parents and children realized the importance of obtaining as good an education as it is possible to do. Years ago our boys and girls attended school until eighteen or nineteen years old, and I never heard a man say he went to school more than it was necessary, but many have said they wished they could have gone more; now as soon as the law allows the children are allowed to leave school, it will be a matter of regret to them when too late, and it is the parents who need encourage them to improve the time and privileges which they now have.

The whole number of pupils by enumeration, Sept. 1, 1909, between the ages of 5 and 16 years was 56.
